The Prison Reforms Committee observe in para 85 of chapter III of their Report that women under sentence of death should be kept in a cell in the female yard, guarded solely by female warders. This point is not specifically provided for in Rule 700 of the Jail manual.

2) Rule 700 of our Rules is identical with the rules 709 of the Madras Manual and provides that - "the preceding rules are applied to female prisoners under sentence of death which it follows that rule 690 (798) which provides for confinement in a condemned cell is applicable to female prisoners.

3) The I. G. of Prisons states that this has been practice, but a rule to the effect is necessary.

4) A rule may perhaps be framed as proposed by the I. G. P and the matter made explicit.
